A CALIDORABLE FEAST

Mouths Water for Winter's Bounty

Calidore the Ancient's feast in Elmet is only weeks away and we at the Patriot are glad of the leisure our warhost's heroes will enjoy. As long as they're still fighting fit come the spring, of course! And on that subject we ask what fresh enemies will look hungrily at Albion in the new year? What evils must be burned in the light before they grow and start to feed on our people? Be vigilant, be watchful and hold the Gods of Albion close to guide your choices.

GIVE. THIS WINTER.

The Hospitallers of Damacest help to make up for those who may not care sufficiently for the people of Albion. Share your wealth and invest in your own futures by donating to these great and humble people. Help them to lift the smallest of us when hunger comes to call or poverty pinches at pockets.

Warming blankets on Banquet Night?

As the warhost plunges into well-earned drink and delicacies, what booze-sodden thoughts will lead to noisy ruffles in the bedding? We're interested to hear your tales, whilst the nights close in and the fields get a brief rest from war. There are bonuses for drawings or woodcuts. Not that kind of woodcut though.

WEATHER WARNING

Even with ancient evils, new magics, old jealousies and battles for power we must remember each day. Mind the thatch, mend your tiles, shore up your pitch-sealed walls. A wet and chilly time is ahead again and the hatches should be battened down to keep Albion dry and healthy until the sun is blazing again. Sastrines be praised for the bounty of seasons. Glory to Damacest for the kindness of those who tend the needy in poor times. May Draco spit on those who unfairly help themselves and shut out strangers in need.

THE WIDER WORLD

We welcome contributions of news from other lands. Whether you've travelled there yourself as a person of Albion or you write from abroad of your homelands.

Please send your submissions to the Albion Patriot.
