A WARNING AT DINNER

SHE COMES. WHO WILL LISTEN?

The year and a day is nearly done. The banishment wanes. She who has been called a mother to Albion can soon reach out from her exile. Who will heed her warnings? Why does she still warn, when so many have ignored her time and time again? The Dark Lady Morgaine is shadowed with secrets and old knowledge. What path shall Albion choose when the blades of justice and righteous vengeance shall next be raised in the face of evil? Read on for an explanation for this odd beginning.

THORNY BANQUET: SWEET SUCCESS

The food was as fine as that imagined in Melaphine's Halls and the company bright and warm. We've received no reports of sordid behaviour or vomiting into cheese. This year was clearly a quiet one but there's hope for 1119.

A life in the warhost is measured in seasons, not decades, so the luxury of a winter feast for such heroes of Albion seems well-deserved. Thank you, heroes!

Warning from dark corners

Morgaine's voice heard in Elmet hall. And Gethan's too? When will Albion's current strangeness pass and can we soon trust the walls to not speak to the people with mystic warnings and threats?!

DEIRA – STILL HAS SNAKES IN

Pride comes before falling down a steep flight of stairs. We at the Patriot are sure that such an event, or a criminal trial and punishment, only happens to the most appropriate people. And soon, please.

Long live King Beaumont and Queen Margaery! The much-loved monarchs of today's vital, important and ascending Deira. Evil attempts against them notwithstanding.

ELMET'S LATEST RESIDENTS

THE HOUSE OF THORNS

Have these ancient spirits and/or heroes now been accepted into Elmet society? In a kingdom with a questing king far abroad, how will these newcomers mix with the high society of hardened Elmet? Will the threats within the borders of this country be a waxing or a waning for Elmet, and the new house? Our brave warhost shall lend aid!

Quills at Albion Patriot wear thin. New writing staff needed. Wrist injuries are on the rise. From writing hard.
