GLARAMARA: the RECKONING

A Most Costly Victory Against Domination's Outrageous Evils

With victory in Steppe lands being not as big as some may have liked, expectations were high for battle in Glaramara at Renewal this year. We at the Patriot hear that Glaramara is a city and a fae of House Magister, our allies. Domination failed to take it due to huge and spunky heroism that shot all up in the faces of the enemies of the Free People. There were losses, as well, who shall be mourned.

A Profile in Duty – Sir Alistair, Lord Greystoke

A knight of Trask. A Lord of Albion. A friend to enemies as well as loved ones. Bright, stern, loyal. He wore a great helm. He is survived by his intelligent and beautiful wife and his equally dutiful, wise and beloved sister Elizabeth Yates, Hand to the Prince. He is deeply missed and mourned by good people all across Albion, not just in his home in Norholt.

Sir Alistair's path has ended but he forged a legend that shall be remembered.

DEAD – Domination

This year has brought low many of our enemy fae forces on the side of Domination.

In July Marcus Khan was slain. Writing now in August we are very thankful that the cruel Wade Inducu and evil Astrid Deering-Khan have met their ends. Glory to the Free Peoples! Is it peace now?

Gethan

It's been a quiet month. Some kind of evil holiday? What a wet shit.

ESSEX – A Wren and her Brave Suitors

Love is in the air. All eyes of Essex seems as torn as their lovely queen! Bearded, bladed and bear-like or the most cunning and lordly of the forest's hunters. Gasp!

How shall she choose? Should she choose at all?

We hear the lady's bright new cloak, a suitor's gift, is very becoming.

Lust for material possessions is apparently rude but we at the Patriot would love to know what her majesty's other suitor shall bring?

SUSSEX – Benegar Abdicates!

King Benegar of Sussex abdicates his throne in favour of the now King Luncan. Another great change in the fabric of Albion. But why?

ELMET – A Feast!

Heroes of the Albion warhost, royal and peasant alike, have been invited to Elmet for a winter feast by Sir Calidore the Ancient. Is this prosperity returning to a challenging land?
