ALBION'S FINEST SEEK NEW EXCALIBUR

Courageous High Queen Graziella Whitcombe faces down the Mythwalker Herne whilst celebrating a successful political marriage in Norholt.

Our reporter suggests that there was shock in the hall as Herne *demand*ed that our own High Queen had to choose on of two futures for Albion.

Whispers in the household tell of the moment Excalibur shattered as High Queen Grace gave up huge power by stepping aside and surrendering her position to Trask, to protect the people of Albion. Mysterious decision! Our reporter wouldn't want to have to choose!

Who is next? The good!

Our reporter doesn't want to guess, but with Lady Teagan – the Champion of the Gods of Law, King Quentyn – the Hand to High Monarchs, and Queen Esme – Albion Rose and People's Queen, commanding efforts in finding the new sword-bearer, Albion will toughen its stomach and wait to see!

Solkar's Corner: what punishment is best?

Gethan once killed a nun's mother just for writing home. What a badger-fondling, otter fucker! The Patriot would like to hear suggestions for the best punishment for “No more Gethan day”!

Who is next? The bad?

Evil, short and unlikable “great villain”

Gethan Gaharis still wants the throne.

The Patriot expects great celebrations for the day he's brought to justice. The people will want a new public holiday!

How does it go with an Al-Amukh?

Baron Greystoke of Norholt enjoys wedding night with pretty blue wife! Our reporter isn't sure how it works with a Sea Lady but her smile was bright and she seems to love Albion as much as she does her husband!
