Dark Words Haunt Albion Warhost

We at the Patriot have news that evil messages have been repeatedly heard by our brave warhost. Fortunately these heroes are too mighty to be swayed by the ragged naggings of snaggle-toothed spirits, when they're busy passionately protecting the proud people of prosperous Albion! Back to the beyond for you, you wicked, witless, wearisome and wavering wraiths! We are the light in the darkness, and evil powers don't understand who they've attacked!

Albion's Gods won't put up with cruel whisperings from the shadows which try and worry their people, like the wordy echoes of the now-defeated Gethan's thunderous fart-breath.

NORHOLT: Coronation Fever Grows!

Famous at home for her wisdom, who is Queen-in-waiting Elizabeth Yates to the rest of the people of Albion? Read on for a profile in patriotism!

Born as the younger child of the noble house Yates, Elizabeth was a gentle lady of the quiet principality of Norholt. With an older brother, the late and lamented Sir Alistair, Baron Greystoke, becoming a Templar of Trask, Elizabeth was set for milder matters. This was not to be. An adventurous spirit meant a bow was often to hand for Elizabeth, as was a sword for safeguarding the roads of Norholt when injustice demanded her service.

In the same year as her father was cruelly killed by the dastardly Gethan, before his destruction, her brother also fell fighting feckless fae of the side of Domination (Boo! Hiss!). Tragedy and responsibility fell upon the young woman as she rose to the challenge of protecting her people, as a fair and judicious leader, and as a warrior of the honourable Order of Avalon. Swoon!

We at the Patriot hope for a worthy and welcoming reign for the new queen, starting with her forthcoming coronation that so many of Albion's allies will also attend. Many are her challenges, in the past and in the future. She will not falter.

FAILURE BITES ALL OF US, SOME DAY

We at the Patriot understand that the Albion warhost put some of its own on trial whilst in Teutonia. Justice is for even our best and brightest warriors. No announcements have been made of punishments apart from vague threats of more serious judgements if the offence is repeated! Come on, Warhost!

Calamity for Camille!

Casualties are tragic and painful risks all people of Albion have experience of. Whether it's a cart accident, a disease or violence we are all accustomed to loss in our lives, as well as joy.

The very sad death of Camille of the House of Thorns is another painful event. Slain in the dark whilst the warhost was in the field in Teutonia, we at the Patriot are very sad to see her go to Melaphine's Halls so soon. Camille was so brave and clever and did a huge amount of good with her great talents. She sets us all an example of quiet bravery and clear thinking in the face of evil.

Casualties in the warhost predominantly affecting short men

The warhost is experiencing a high rate of casualties among short fighting men (below five feet and six inches) in 1119. This is a change on 1118's trend of male casualties being mostly over six feet in height. We are sure that height will be a key part of 1119's warrior training in the warhost to better understand and reduce these worrying statistics.

FAE WAR ENDED

One source suggests the forces of damnable Domination gave their surrender whilst the allied nations were in Teutonia. Too late to have saved all the lives lost though! Bunch of crusted up, moldy arseholes. We pray that our fallen rest safe and in peace with Melaphine.

Victory in Teutonia – but where's Sable?

Ravenburg, a Teutonian city, successfully held out against the forces of Destruction thanks to the allied nations. Their leader, Sable, hasn't been seen so must be planning something awful! Sable is an old Albion problem and we hope our warhost can put him to (last) rights!

Legendary Baron Stanley Attacked!

Whilst in Teutonia, we at the Patriot witnessed an injured-looking Baron Stanley attending the warhost for help. Is this a follow up to the attack on Santia? What mystery is taking place in Essex? Enquiring minds want to know!
